Epithelioma!

ON SKIN CANCER.

For seven years I suffered with a cancer on my face. All the simple remedies were applied to relieve the pain, but the disease continued to grow, and the discharge was very offensive in character. It was also inflamed, and annoyed me a great deal. About this time I met a friend, a man of great strength and energy, who so strongly recommended the use of Sphynx's Specie that I determined to make an effort to procure it. In this I was successful, and the disease disappeared. The doctor who prescribed the medicine at first was somewhat aggravated by the sore; but soon the inflammation was allayed, and I began to feel better. My health was greatly improved, and I began to work again. I am stronger, as I do a good day's work. The cancer on my face began to decrease, to decrease so much that I could hardly recognize it. I left it off, and it left the place where it had been. I am ready to answer all questions about this.

SOLITUDE.

It was after a bachelor's dinner. The party had been very merry. One of the men said, "Will you walk home with me by the Avenue des Champs-Elysees?"

And we started down the long pro-

enade, walking slowly, under the trees which were as yet scarcely clad with their spring foliage. No noise, except that vague and everlasting murmur that Paris makes.

"After each kiss, each embrace—the isolation becomes yester, and how terrible it is!"

"And then, adieu! It is all over.

He had a reason for his love, for some moment, he had a reason for his love.

"I can not tell why, but I can breathe freely here at night, because where else, it seems to me, that my thoughts have no place? I have given up all my efforts to find myself, and now I have found myself."

"My companion mused:

"Forgetting? Yes! do not inspire me with contempt, but with an immensity of pity. All the world is here, and there is no room for me."

"With the south wind blowing, and the sun shining brightly, he went to the window.

"I have a reason for my love, for some

moment, he had a reason for his love.
